Matt Florell, President

Subject: 2012 Florida General Election polling results of likely voters for select U.S. Congressional and Florida State Senate races

Date: October 18, 2012

Executive Summary:

This poll of likely voters was conducted on Tuesday, October 16, 2012. This poll used the registered voter lists supplied by the state of Florida as of October 3rd, 2012. The sample of voters that were called included random samples of registered voters in several Congressional and state Senate districts.

The races surveyed included: Six U.S. Congressional races and Two Florida state Senate races.

Methodology:

The poll was conducted by an automated phone call polling system. The results were then weighted to account for proportional differences between the respondents' demographics and the demographics of the active voter population and the registered voter population separately. The demographics used were: political party, race and age.

The voters polled were chosen at random within the districts of each polled race.

This poll is different from our recent polls in that we have in effect conducted two separate polls for each race: a poll of registered voters that uses a sample from all registered voters and then weights the results against the demographics of all registered voters, and a poll of active voters that uses a sample from only those people who have voted in an election within the last four years and then weights the results against the demographics of all active voters.

In order to qualify respondents as likely voters, the voters were asked if they were planning to vote in the November 6th general election. Only if they responded that they were planning to vote were they then asked the other questions in this poll.

The scientific results shown in the summary below will have the sample size and margin of error for each set of results shown above those results. The margins of error shown are all at a 95% confidence level.
